The Lake District Book Festival comprises...

Every June, a long weekend of talks, interviews, panels and debates…

- …featuring a combination of exceptional local, national and international speakers – 'bringing the world to the Lakes & the Lakes to the world',
- all talks & debates taking place in the tents and in the Grandstand building of Cartmel Racecourse, with an opening ceremony in the sublime 12th century Cartmel Priory;
- Food producers selling the best of home-grown, home-made (including vegan and organic) food from across the county;
- Festival Bookshop by Verey Books of Pooley Bridge.

Why sponsor a book festival?

- Book festivals are an international phenomenon. They bring debate, the exploration of ideas in all sectors, challenge.
- Book festivals are analogue, not digital. Guests have the opportunity to listen to and question top writers and thinkers in person.
- A book festival audience is educated, curious, affluent. The economic benefits to an area hosting a book festival include a significant boost to tourism income. (June being a ‘shoulder period’, the timing of The Lake District Book Festival is of particular benefit to local hotel & accommodation owners.)
- An important adjunct of The Lake District Book Festival is Cumbria Young Readers. As funding for the Festival consolidates, so too opportunities for the schools programme will grow. (see schools programme, p8)
- To sponsor The Lake District Book Festival will be to celebrate and supplement the region’s rich literary tradition – whose leading lights vary from William Wordsworth & Arthur Ransome to Sarah Hall & James Rebanks.

Cumbria Young Readers
The next chapter...

An intrinsic part of the festival is the provision of a schools programme that will share the benefits of the festival with young writers, artists and opinion-formers of the future.

- In partnership with an initial four secondary schools (Cartmel CofE, Ulverston Victoria, Dallam School & St Bernard's, Barrow), the Festival offers twice-yearly visits from leading writers.

- The undertaking is to send not YA or children's authors but grown-up authors of national reputation who will talk about their lives, their practice, their inspirations. The aim is to transport 14-18 year old students beyond the confines of the school walls and give them a sense of the tremendous possibility of the written and spoken word - and its critical importance to a functioning society.

- An important corollary of this programme is the Festival Volunteers Scheme, in which those same students are invited to take part in the delivery of the Festival itself, further endorsing the message that the arts and the humanities bring eye-opening, horizon-changing opportunities. In 2026, this scheme involved 98 student volunteers and was extremely popular with and well received by schools, students & parents alike.

The case for Cartmel

- Approximately 18 million walkers and holidaymakers visit the Lake District every year – around 200,000 of these visit Cartmel.

- The Festival audience comes not just from Cumbria & the Lakes but from the university city of Lancaster, the Unesco City of Literature Manchester and from across Lancashire, Greater Manchester and Yorkshire. Cartmel has excellent transport links.

- Cartmel occupies a stunning location beneath Cartmel Fell, close to the mouth of the Morecambe Estuary. 'A thimble full of diamonds', it is home to the heartbreakingly beautiful Cartmel Priory and is known as a gastronomic destination thanks to its range of pubs, cafés, artisanal food shops & to Simon Rogan's Michelin 3* restaurant, L'Enclume.

- The area is fully geared for visitors – there are scores of B&Bs, pubs, holiday lets, hotels and other rentable accommodation.

- Cartmel Racecourse has an extensive permanent infrastructure while its management has long experience in managing large influxes of visitors.
